Subject Line: Don't get caught with your pants down!

Hello Matey_____

Unless your name is Desmond Doss, you don't go to war without a weapon or at least some basic training. The same goes with your everyday life. Even a bit of preparation will help you get through the day. When it comes to natural disasters and other emergencies, it pays to be prepared.

The main objective of prepping is to make sure you're well-equipped to survive such emergencies. Prepping involves stocking up on food, water and other essentials. It is also about self-sustainability, home security, financial security, and personal safety among other things. Creating emergency plans is also an important aspect of prepping.

Perhaps the most exciting part of prepping is collecting survival gear and learning how to use them in different situations. Multi-tools, pocket knives, pepper sprays, LED flashlights, and portable lanterns are just a few of the survival tools that you'll need in building your everyday carry kits, bug out bags and other emergency kits. They will also be useful during blackouts and other emergencies. All these are necessary so you won't be caught with your pants down when disaster strikes.

Enjoy,

Tee Jay

How to Prepare for Blackouts

A power outage is more than just an inconvenience. It's not just about missing your favorite show or being unable to charge your phone to post on Instagram. Power outages can cause food to spoil, damage equipment and appliances, and affect work and businesses. Read More Here
