

What Would I Do If I Was Lost in The Jungle (Part 2)

The sun on my face woke me up. I squinted against the brightness and slowly sat up, taking in my surroundings. I must've been out for a couple of hours. I could've used a couple more hours of sleep but somehow I feel a bit better and lighter than yesterday. I was right. I needed to get some shuteye. Proper rest will help me think clearer and get through this jungle adventure in one piece.

As I gathered my thoughts, I was reminded of the dream I had last night. It felt so real though I could vaguely remember the woman that appeared in my dreams. I do recall the woman was in some dire situation and needed help. I wish I could remember more but maybe it's for the best. After all, it was just a dream.

SUMMER CAMPING TIPS

Condense your ice chest

Freeze water bottles to use for ice in your cooler so it doesn't waste space or make a soggy mess. Keep cooler ice in sealed baggies for ice-cold drinking/bandana soaking water when it melts.
