

Hello Matey_____

Like Thanos (or at least as he claims to be), some emergencies are inevitable. Natural disasters like hurricanes, for example, will happen whether you like it or not. We can only soften the blow by taking climate change seriously and developing an emergency preparedness plan. Of course, you're not only prepping for natural calamities. There are plenty of other kinds of emergencies that you also have to prepare for. You should consider each possible emergency when you start building your disaster preparedness plan. Include the steps you need to prepare for the emergency as well as the thing you have to do as the disaster is happening. Then you also need to be ready for the outcome. You should know what to do in case someone in the family goes missing. Having proper search and rescue training and the right gear should increase your chances of getting everyone safely back together. And by everyone, that includes your beloved pets. Makes sure to include each member of the household in your evacuation plan so that no one gets left behind when disaster strikes.

Enjoy,

Tee Jay

11 Search and Rescue Tools You Need In An Emergency

There are times when nothing seems to go according to plan. Hopefully, these moments don't happen while you're out hiking, backpacking, or climbing mountains. When something goes wrong, you may end up lost or stranded. Worse, you could be hurt and unable to reach safety and get medical help. During such unfortunate scenarios, you'd wish a search and rescue party was out looking for your sorry arse. On the other hand, if it was someone you know that went missing, you'd want to help out as much as you can. Read More Here
